

I see no reason for the CBA to change the Indiana law.

If I am doing business with them, then I have their number to reach them.

If they need to get me information they can send it to me through the postal service or by e-mail.

Just because I have done some kind of business with them should not allow them to bother me with cold calls.

The Indiana system has been great and does not need to be changed.

All the companies that need to get me information still can.
